The after-school carnival was a new addition to the homecoming repertoire this year. According to student council adviser Ms. Kay Starrett, the original plan for the carnival was for the first $25 earned by each club to go to the Make-A-Wish Foundation. However, for a reason that remains hard to pin down, Make-A-Wish was not interested in the donation and the student council will work to benefit the Special Olympics, instead.

“[Since] we made a large amount of money on homecoming passes...we decided not to keep any money from the carnival,” Starrett says. The clubs will be able to keep their money while the Special Olympics is supported by the money made from the passes.

Overall, student council saw the carnival as an overall and it will likely become an annual event. “If the clubs still want to participate, we will do it every year,” Starrett says.

About 20 clubs participated in the carnival hosting various booths, bringing in a total of $800 in ticket sales. Starrett says boys’ rugby brought in the most money--around $90--selling Monster drinks.
